LP@HOME OPERA

On the following slide are some links and information for Opera Companies who are sharing their work free of charge..

Why should I be interested in Opera? Why Not? There would not be any stage musicals if Opera had not happened as it set the benchmark of what could be achieved in Musical Theatre. Some of the best music ever written has been made for Opera. The art form is a hugely ambitious task to get right as it brings together stage direction and acting with orchestral music, singing, dance and amazing set design. When all these come together the results are stunning! Also... one day someone might ask you what you think about Opera and if you don't know you will not be able to answer will you?

Opera

Royal Opera House

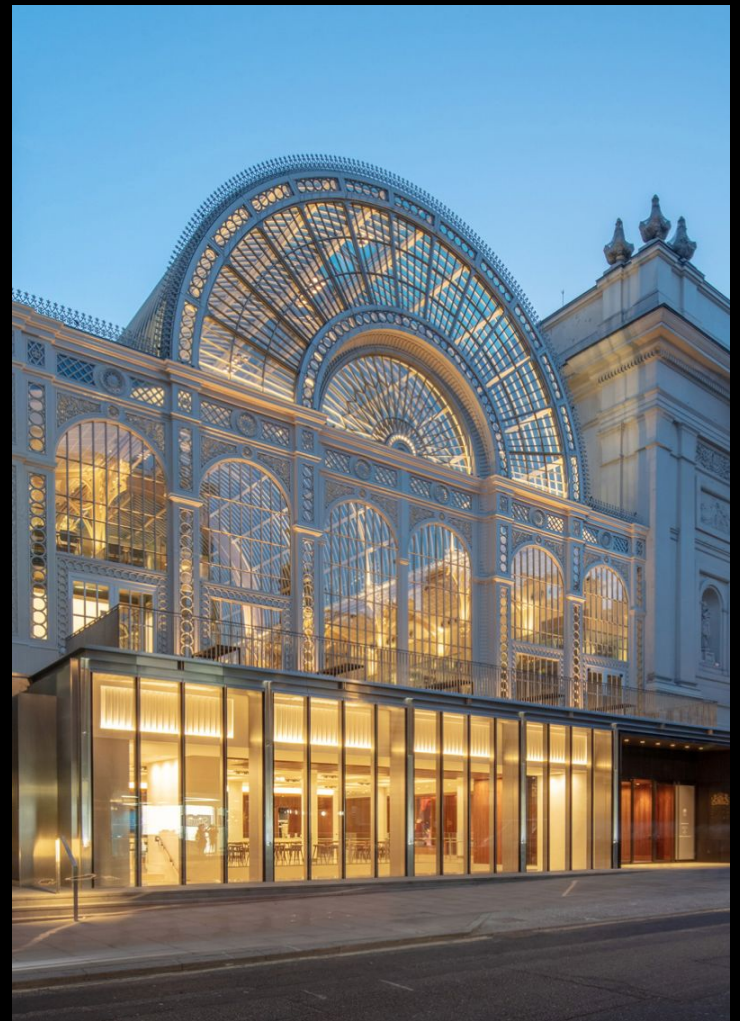

<https://www.roh.org.uk>

The Royal Opera House, in Covent Garden in London is one of the greatest opera theatres and companies in the world. It is also one of the oldest. Their productions are world-renowned.

The ROH are showing videos of productions on the youtube channel (link below). The first one is 'Cosi Fan Tutti' by Mozart and is highly recommended...

Also on their Youtube channel are lots of other excerpts from other productions - some very short and some films of other full productions.

<https://www.youtube.com/royaloperahouse>

OperaVision has 29 Operas for you to see in full right now on their website for free! This is an amazing resource! These are high quality films and you really get a great sense of the theatres in which they are performed. Try it out!

“OperaVision brings together 29 partners from 17 countries and invites you to travel and discover the diversity of opera from wherever you want, whenever you want.”

LP@HOME THEATRE

The BBC has announced further programming for its "Culture in Quarantine" scheme to run while arts venues are locked down.

The company will broadcast six of the RSC's recent productions on BBC Four and BBC iPlayer:

Macbeth with Christopher Eccleston and Niamh Cusack

Othello with Hugh Quarshie in the title role and Lucian Msamati as Iago

Romeo and Juliet with Bally Gill as Romeo and Karen Fishwick as Juliet

The Merchant of Venice with Makram J Khoury as Shylock

Much Ado About Nothing with Edward Bennett as Benedick and Michelle Terry as Beatrice

Hamlet with Paapa Essiedu in the title role

As formerly announced, the BBC will also collaborate with The Space to present new filmed recordings of Mike Bartlett's Albion, Emma Rice's Wise Children and Battersea Arts Centre's Frankenstein, as well as BalletBoyz's new piece Deluxe. On top of this, Russell T Davies' TV version of A Midsummer Night's Dream and Anthony Hopkins' King Lear will be repeated.

David Greig's new play Adventures With The Painted People, set 2000 years ago in Pitlochry, will premiere on BBC Radio 3. Bryony Kimmings will investigate the relationship between opera and motherhood in Opera Mums, while Margaret Atwood and Mary Beard will present a new puppetry show created by Atwood in response to an Edgar Allan Poe tale.

The screenshot shows a BBC Arts article titled "Novels That Shaped Our World". At the top, there are several book covers including "The Bell Jar", "The Catcher in the Rye", "The Hobbit", "The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings", and "White Teeth". Below the covers are three video thumbnails. The first is titled "Finding your story" with the text "Ten remarkable novels about identity: Pick one and dive in to the conversation". The second is titled "How many have you read?" with the text "After a passionate debate, our expert panel picked these 100 novels". The third is titled "'I was being told I wasn't going to be around for very much longer'" with the text "During dark days Syima Aslam found comfort in the idea of sharing The Chronicles of Narnia with her daughter". The article is attributed to "BBC ARTS".
